The implementation of the hotspots in Italy and Greece : A study

ECRE, 2016, 29 pp.

The EU 'hotspot approach' was designed to ensure operational support to Member States facing disproportionate migratory pressure. However, one year since the first hotspots was set up and half a year since the entry into force of the EU Turkey Statement, research reveals that the pressure in these countries is growing and the challenges in accessing protection are multiplying.

Promises of Paradise: A Study on Official ISIS-Propaganda Targeting Women: Master thesis / Louisa Tarras-Wahlberg

Swedish Defence University, May 2016, 53 pp.

Why women are drawn to violent Islamic extremist groups is rather unexplored. Through a qualitative text analysis of official ISIS-propaganda this thesis investigates what promises the organization makes to women, examining pull-factors derived from social media studies of female migration to ISIS-held territories.

Migrants in Countries in Crisis : Emerging Findings: A Comparative Study of Six Crisis Situations / Maegan Hendow, Robtel Neajai Pailey, Alessandra Bravi

International Centre for Migration Policy Development (ICMPD), 2016, 79 pp.

This report contributes to a growing debate about how to prepare for and respond to the critical situation of international migrants who are caught up in crises in the countries in which they have settled. It presents emerging findings from ongoing research on case studies of various crises in six countries over the last two decades – Côte d'Ivoire, Lebanon, South Africa, Thailand, Libya and Central African Republic (CAR) – that have significantly affected migrants living in these countries, their households at home and abroad, as well as their countries of origin and transit in a myriad of ways.

The emergence of a new foreign migration policy in Europe - Vienna Migration Conference / Martin Hofmann

International Centre for Migration Policy Development (ICMPD), Nov. 2016, 20 pp. (ICMPD Working Paper 11)

The Valletta Action Plan, the EU – Turkey Statement, the new EU Partnership Framework and the New York Declaration are all important milestones on the path to a new foreign migration policy in Europe and on a global scale. They aim at finding a common international response to one of the biggest challenges of our time. The purpose of this Working Paper is to provide an overview of how these instruments developed, analyse their main features and discuss whether they really represent a breakthrough towards a new thinking on European and international migration policy and durable solutions in the European and international context.

“Special Measures” : Detention and Torture in the Chinese Communist Party’s Shuanggui System

HRW, Dec. 2016, 127 pp.

The report details abuses against shuanggui detainees, including prolonged sleep deprivation, being forced into stress positions for extended periods of time, deprivation of water and food, and severe beatings. Detainees are also subject to solitary and incommunicado detention in unofficial detention facilities. After “confessing” to corruption, they are typically brought into the criminal justice system, convicted, and sentenced to often lengthy prison terms.

Silencing Turkey's Media : The Government's Deepening Assault on Critical Journalism

HRW, Dec. 2016, 81 pp.

The report documents five important components of the crackdown on independent domestic media in Turkey, including the use of the criminal justice system to prosecute and jail journalists on bogus charges of terrorism, insulting public officials, or crimes against the state. Human Rights Watch also documented threats and physical attacks on journalists and media organizations; government interference with editorial independence and pressure on media organizations to fire critical journalists; the government's takeover or closure of private media companies; and restrictions on access to the airwaves, fines, and closure of critical television stations.

"Bound by Brotherhood" : India's Failure to End Killings in Police Custody

HRW, Dec. 2016, 128 pp.

The report examines police disregard for arrest regulations, custodial deaths from torture, and impunity for those responsible. It draws on in-depth investigations into 17 deaths in custody that occurred between 2009 and 2015, including more than 70 interviews with victims' family members, witnesses, justice experts, and police officials. In each of the 17 cases, the police did not follow proper arrest procedures, making the suspect more vulnerable to abuse.

"I Want to Live With My Head Held High" : Abuses in Bangladesh's Legal Recognition of Hijras

HRW, Dec. 2016, 49 pp.

The report documents abuses suffered by a group of hijras, when they were forced to undergo so-called medical examinations at a hospital in Dhaka, the capital, in 2015, as part of a government employment program. The medical exams were ordered as part of the routine government hiring procedure, but absent a clear procedures to identify and respect hijras, hospital staff responded based on their own personal biases. Although a 2013 directive from the cabinet recognizes hijras as a third gender, the government has not developed rights-based procedures for changing their gender on official documents, leaving them open to abuse when they seek to assert their rights, Human Rights Watch found.

Myanmar: "We are at Breaking Point"-Rohingya: Persecuted in Myanmar, Neglected in Bangladesh

Amnesty International, Dec. 2016, 62 pp.

This report documents a campaign of violence by the Myanmar security forces against Rohingya since 9 October 2016. Soldiers and police have randomly fired on and killed civilians, raped women and girls, torched whole villages and arbitrarily arrested Rohingya men without any information about their whereabouts or charges. These actions have been a form of collective punishment targeting Rohingya in northern Rakhine state, and may amount to crimes against humanity.

Accelerating Threats from Climate Change: Disasters and Displacement in Myanmar

Refugees International, Dec. 2016, 16 pp. (Field report)

In the summer of 2015, Myanmar experienced massive floods and associated landslides that affected nine million people. Since then, the country has seen dramatic political change, while confronting a litany of ongoing humanitarian crises. As the government strives to juggle humanitarian needs with longer-term development issues, it must confront its extreme vulnerability to disasters and climate change.

Ukraine: Translating IDPs' protection into legislative action

IDMC, Dec. 2016, 6 pp.

This paper provides an overview of issues that have emerged during Ukraine's development of a normative response to internal displacement, and the challenges inherent in implementing the regulatory framework that was established at the onset of the crisis. It focuses on three areas that are clearly problematic: IDPs' registration and the granting of a legal status for them; civil registration and the issuance of documents; and effective and non-discriminatory access to social benefits and pensions.

Dynamic Data Hub

European Commission's Knowledge Centre on Migration and Demography (KCMD)

As a platform that gathers pre-processes and filters data, the hub will validate information, highlight limitations and put migration data into context. With an evolving data catalogue, the hub will be enriched over time and help policy-makers carry out analyses for improved governance of migration flows and identifying root causes.

Migration Policy Practice

IOM, Dec. 2016, 52 pp. (Vol. VI, Number 4, October-December 2016)

A Bimonthly Journal for and by Policymakers Worldwide. The fifth special anniversary issue focuses on “safe migration”. Based on the situation in Europe and the neighbouring countries, it explores how data on both “safe” and “unsafe” migration could be collected in a more systematic fashion. The theme of this special issue was chosen, in particular, in response to the growing challenges faced by the international statistical community in finding ways to define and measure “safe” and “unsafe” migration, including within the framework of the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development that was adopted in 2015.

EUROPA: An Illustrated Introduction to Europe for Migrants and Refugees

Allianz Cultural Foundation, Nov. 2016, 296 pp.

This publication aims to introduce newcomers to the motivations behind the creation of the European Union, how it developed, its current ethos, and the relevant debates that will determine its future.

The book is written in four languages — English, French, Arabic and Farsi — and it is part history primer, part guide book, part resource list.
